Join the 'dots as a website deployment assistant

Background to Squaredot Agency

Squaredot is an award winning B2B marketing agency based in Ireland. We help B2B technology brands get famous and grow fast. We do everything from positioning, strategy and planning to website design & development, branding, creative content, campaigns and promotion.

We believe in creativity and in challenging the old-fashioned misconception that B2B marketing is boring and all the fun is in B2C. In fact we'd go one step further - we believe it's an incredibly exciting time for B2B tech in particular. B2B tech is on the frontlines of the global economic recovery, helping to digitally transform entire industries and their marketing potential is off the charts. We're proud to serve this sector.

We like to do really good work. And delivering great creative work boils down to teamwork. We have different backgrounds (strategic, creative, brand, design and web backgrounds) on both the agency and client side of the fence. We value our differences and learn from each other. Collaboration is key. We all get along. Mainly because we're decent folk.

We're also growing fast, so constantly on the lookout for great people with the right attitude.

The role on offer

We're looking for someone who likes the sound of the above to join our Web team as a deploy assistant. We have quite a few website projects on at the moment and we are looking for someone to help us to test, snag, populate and deploy the new websites once they are built by our developers.

Ideally, we would like someone who can hit the ground running, someone who has some understanding of how good websites are built, front-end development, CMS and is able to spot things that are not as they should be and explain them to the team.

This is a paid, part-time role. You'll work remotely, and on a project-by-project basis. Consider this a foot in the door opportunity. Show initiative, dedication, meticulous attention to detail, tech enthusiasm and ability to add value and other doors in Squaredot may open for you.

What you bring to the table

- Studying or completed a university or college IT-related degree…..or alternatively a marketing-related degree with good technical understanding

- Great English language knowledge (be able to communicate clearly with the Squaredot team)

- Front-end development skills would be a plus

- Previous experience working in CMS systems, in particular HubSpot, would be a bonus (but the right person will pick this up quickly)

- Strong attention to detail is really important for this role

- And an ability to handle issues with an appropriate sense of urgency

- Capacity to work independently and meet deadlines

- Talent for spotting and remedying bugs & snags when launching new websites - whether related to web copy, content, design or function

What we offer:

- Opportunity to gain experience working on real-life projects in an international team

- Work with a variety of exciting growing tech companies operating in Ireland and throughout the world

- Practise and improve your English by working with a bunch of really nice people, day to day, in a diverse and inclusive environment where differences are recognised and valued
